LOCATION 1

Today's trail begins at a cross, remembering national fights.
Set your path North and West, down a lane with dangling lights.

Keep your eyes peeled, because a telephone box is where
You must turn left and head to a quaintly hidden square

Where a short black fence and tall trees wrap up a little park,
Stand in the center, and scan to learn of a forgotten landmark.

Now leave behind the fallen leaves to autumn's equinox
And retrace your steps, all the way, to the red phoning box.

There take a left, and let the lamps lead you till the end
Of the pavement, where both streets stop, meet, and bend.

Spin to the right and raise your eyes, though not quite to the skies,
For just beneath, you'll spot an ad for drinks that energise.

LOCATION 3

Now 'tis the time to set foot North, further into Jericho,
And discover this old neighbourhood's bustling variety show.

You'll walk past baristas, bartenders, chefs and florists,
Printers and doctors, and movies by indie film artists.

Once you reach the roundabout, turn left until you hit
Two black gates with red bricks, atop which stone birds sit.
